

University of Washington Psychiatry Residency Program

The University of Washington aims to provide outstanding clinical education in psychiatry, an intellectually stimulating and supportive learning environment, a rich interdisciplinary environment for research and scholarship, and a wealth of opportunities to work with underserved and disadvantaged mentally ill populations throughout our community and our region. We hope to inspire our residents to make a difference through careers in research, teaching, community psychiatry, and clinical practice. We have career enrichment pathways in research, teaching, integrated care, addiction, community leadership, global mental health & cultural psychiatry, perinatal psychiatry, advanced psychotherapy and advanced psychopharmacology. We also have exceptional opportunities to continue training with strong fellowships in addictions, geriatrics, consultation-liaison psychiatry, child & adolescent psychiatry, perinatal psychiatry and integrated care.
