David Ross, MD

AADPRT Position: Co-chair, Neuroscience Education Committee

Dr. Ross has been Associate Program Director of the Yale Adult Psychiatry Residency since 2009. The primary focus of his scholarly activities is on designing innovative educational resources with a particular emphasis on how to teach neuroscience effectively to psychiatry residents. He is a Co-founder and Co-chair of the National Neuroscience Curriculum Initiative. He is also involved in a series of research projects exploring the application process to residency and, in particular, studying possible racial and gender disparities.
