

University of Toledo – Psychiatry

The General Psychiatry Residency program at The University of Toledo College of Medicine and Life Sciences is dedicated to providing a strong clinical training in the various aspects of general psychiatry in an academic and community setting.

We carefully balance the educational process while simultaneously strengthening our mission of excellence in patient care, research, and education. Residents receive a progressive education with increasing responsibilities in the field of general psychiatry and its subspecialties.

While the core of the program is designed to produce highly competent, clinical psychiatrists who are eligible for board certification, this program allows for tailoring appropriate experiences for those individuals wishing to pursue academic careers or further fellowship training. The program recognizes that residency training is an active process in which each individual needs a sufficiently wide range of opportunity so that they might attain their highest potential. We provide a collegial atmosphere where students, residents, and faculty cooperate in the development of competent caring physicians.
