

Wright State University

Wright State's widely recognized Psychiatry programs include but are not limited to telepsychiatry services, addiction medicine services encompassing a continuum of care staffed by our faculty and residents, comprehensive child and adolescent psychiatry services including college mental health, provision of mental health services, and psychiatric care within the Dayton community hospitals, and a unique program in the assessment and treatment of individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities. The quality of undergraduate and graduate medical education programs in the department has been acknowledged regionally and nationally. In addition to prominent research efforts in addiction medicine, including a strong collaborative relationship with the Center for Interventions, Treatment and Addictions Research (CITAR) within Boonshoft School of Medicine's Department of Population and Public Health Sciences and the mental health/wellness among health care professionals, the residency training program offers in-depth opportunities in learning about providing psychotherapy, an important psychosocial component in caring for all of our patients. We welcome your interest in any aspect of our department.
