

Riverside Medical Center

At Riverside Medical Center, our Psychiatry Residency Program offers a dynamic and supportive training environment that emphasizes clinical excellence, compassionate care, and professional integrity. We are committed to preparing residents to practice independently in general psychiatry or to pursue subspecialty fellowships with confidence in their skills and a deep sense of responsibility toward their patients.

Our program is grounded in the “AMA Principles of Medical Ethics with Annotations Especially Applicable to Psychiatry,” ensuring that ethical practice is not only taught, but consistently modeled throughout training. Residents gain progressive responsibility in delivering safe, effective, and empathetic patient care while participating actively in institutional committees, interdisciplinary collaboration, and medical education.

With a strong focus on current and ever-evolving patient care management, our curriculum promotes lifelong learning, diagnostic mastery, and the ability to adapt in a rapidly changing healthcare landscape. At Riverside, we don't just train psychiatrists, we shape future leaders in mental health care.
