

Columbia/New York State Psychiatric Institute

The Columbia University/New York State Psychiatric Institute Adult residency program is a great place to work and train. We seek curious, kind, collegial team-players who are interested in helping those most in need. As a program, our goal is to train the psychiatrists of the future who will become outstanding clinicians, researchers, leaders, advocates, and teachers and who will find fulfillment in their work and make meaningful contributions to psychiatry. We foster the professional and personal growth of our residents through close supervisory relationships with faculty, process groups with other residents, facilitation of personal psychotherapy, and an open-door policy for problem-solving with program leadership. Our extensive didactic program is broad-based and updated yearly in response to detailed resident feedback and changes in the field. We offer extensive psychotherapy training and many opportunities for scholarship and research. But perhaps our richest resource is our wonderful, diverse community of residents and faculty who work side-by-side to offer outstanding care to our neighbors in Washington Heights and to improve psychiatric care for generations to come. Come join us!
