

The University of Chicago

The University of Chicago Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Neuroscience offers clinical exposure to a broad array of patients in multiple clinical settings, a rigorous educational program in psychiatry and neuroscience balancing individual mentorship, seminars and lectures, an individually-tailored research training program, and close supervision and teaching about psychotherapies beginning in PGY-2. Located on the South Side of Chicago, our patient population includes those living in areas of urban violence and poverty, patients from the greater Chicago area , and national and international referrals for highly specialized cancer and transplant care whom we serve on the Consult Liaison service. The University, the Hospital and our Department have developed significant collaborations on programs focusing on urban trauma. The University of Chicago is often known as the teacher of teachers. Education is of central importance in our Department: we are all teachers and students at the same time, for it is through teaching that we learn best.
